JOSEPH BRENNNA

Inventing Time
(W.A.R.?)

On his 2002 album Inventing Time, acoustic guitarist Joseph Brenna combines a spectrum of instrumental guitar styles—from folk, jazz, classical and ragtime—and arrives with an inventive guitar blend. A noted electric guitarist, Brenna became quite ill several years back and during the healing process he turned his thoughts to composing a peaceful and reflective style of acoustic guitar playing. Brenna's compositional gift and love of the guitar is quite obvious on Inventing Time. In the liner notes, Brenna goes into depth about his recovery and how turning towards the spiritual and recuperative aspects that music has on just about everybody is sometimes the best medicine there is. Mixing elements of Leo Kottke and Pat Metheny, Brenna's playing is superb throughout and the celestial CD artwork goes far in explaining Brenna's concerted musical philosophy.
